

DRUNKEN FORESTS, DISAPPEARING DIRT

Permafrost Melt in Alaska

Tour the wonders of Alaska in a Class "C" motorhome with a climate specialist guide. Our exploration will seek out permafrost melt in its many forms. Plan on seeing thermokarst sinks, patterned ground, collapsing and drunken forests, mountainside slumps, Denali, the Haul Road, the Alaska Pipeline, the Yukon, retreating glaciers, wildlife, and all the while, surrounded by the most beautiful and remote wilderness landscapes in North America.

Alaska's Permafrost is Melting

Eight Percent of Boreal Forests are Collapsing in Slow Motion

Entire Mountainsides are Moving

And it is just beginning

Our itinerary can vary on a moment's notice and can include anything the group can agree on that we can cover in our allotted time. Because there are so few roads in Alaska, the identified spots that have been scouted for permafrost and glacier melt are "on the way" in most instances. Rates start at $337 per day for 14 nights/15 days traveling in an RV with four people plus guide for $5,055 per person.
